

How Israel - America - Europe Lost the Geopolitical Battle for the Middle East

By Frank , 25 June 2026

How Israel - America - Europe Lost the Geopolitical Battle for the Middle East

The recent analysis of geopolitical shifts in the Middle East, as sharply set out in the conversation between Nima Alkorshid and former American intelligence officer Scott Ritter, is nothing less than an autopsy of Western foreign policy. What we are witnessing is not merely a series of diplomatic failures; it is the definitive collapse of Western hegemony, driven by incompetent leadership, moral bankruptcy, and a public that has been fed lies for decades. The consequences of the aggressive policies of the United States and Israel are only now becoming truly tangible, and the bill is being presented to a West that imagined itself wealthy and untouchable.

By Frank Dumon

What follows is an unvarnished look at the reality of a defeated Israel, a capitulating America led by a corrupt president, and a Europe and NATO that have made themselves complicit in historic atrocities.

The MoU: Total Capitulation in Trump's Fantasy World

To understand the current impasse, we must first look at the so-called Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) recently signed between the United States and Iran. In the Western mainstream media, this framework is sometimes presented as a diplomatic breakthrough or a clever move by American negotiators. The reality, however, is entirely different. The MoU is a total act of surrender, a capitulation on every front, dictated by Tehran and signed by Donald Trump.

Trump, a man who lives in a complete fantasy world and is rightly regarded as the worst and most corrupt president in the history of the United States, allowed himself to be outmaneuvered by the Iranian negotiators. He signed this document in a setting reminiscent of the humiliation of Versailles, only with the roles reversed. The MoU gives Iran exactly what it wants: economic breathing room, recognition of its regional influence, and the guarantee that the Strait of Hormuz will remain open under Iranian terms.

The fundamental problem is that the United States, the European Union, and Israel are structurally agreement-incapable. They are unable to conclude or uphold agreements because their domestic politics and their blind support for Israel make any form of good-faith diplomacy impossible. Iran understands this better than anyone. They know the U.S. does not keep its word, but they are using this MoU purely to end the economic strangulation of the Strait of Hormuz, which is the only real leverage Iran possesses. Trump, driven by his own narcissism and fear of the upcoming midterm elections, signed this document not out of strategic insight but out of sheer political survival instinct. He hopes the American voter will not see the humiliation, but the Iranians know they are in the driver's seat.

The Economic Abyss: Words Do Not Fill a Wallet

The geopolitical arrogance of the U.S. and Israel comes at a price, and that price is now being paid by ordinary citizens. For years, the American public accepted their government's foreign adventures and unconditional support for Israel as long as their own lives were not disrupted by them. It was a free ride. But the aggression toward Iran and the resulting instability in the Strait of Hormuz have exposed the vulnerability of the Western economy.

There is a simple, harsh truth that Western politics often ignores: words do not fill a wallet.

Rhetoric about 'democracy', 'human rights', or 'unconditional support for allies' does not pay for groceries, pay off mortgages, or cover the energy bill. The American and European populations are now being confronted with empty wallets and bank accounts shrinking because of sky-high energy prices and inflation, directly caused by the West's inability to guarantee regional stability.

This economic pain is finally translating into political consequences. A striking example is the recent political shift in the United States, where the mayor of New York openly blames the powerful pro-Israel lobby AIPAC for the misery and defeated their candidate by a crushing margin. This is a seismic shift. The American people, who historically were always shielded from the economic consequences of Middle East policy, are now beginning to realize that they are paying the bill for someone else's wars. When people are left empty-handed, the tide turns. The American voter will not tolerate their own economy collapsing for the benefit of an Israeli government that is driving its own population and the region into the abyss.

Netanyahu: A War Criminal Reminiscent of Hitler

The architect of this Israeli misery is Benjamin Netanyahu. It is time to take off the diplomatic gloves and call him by his proper name: Netanyahu is a war criminal. The scale of the destruction, suffering, and massacres he has caused in Gaza, Lebanon, and beyond is of such proportions that he joins the greatest criminals in human history in the history books. When we look for historical parallels for the moral depravity and the methods of his rule, the comparison with Adolf Hitler is unfortunately not misplaced when it comes to the systematic destruction of a population group and the creation of a humanitarian hell.

Netanyahu's only goal was to create a 'Greater Israel' through endless warfare and the elimination of every form of Palestinian sovereignty. But his megalomaniacal delusions have maneuvered the country into a hopeless position. He tried to drag the United States into a war with Iran, under the naive assumption that American military power could wipe out Israel's regional enemies. The result was a humiliating defeat on every front. Israel has lost this war. They no longer have any negotiating position, their military deterrence has proven to be a farce, and their economy has become unsustainable.

Inside Israel itself, a fate that Netanyahu himself has sown is now brewing: a civil war. Israeli society has become so extremely polarized that peaceful coexistence has become impossible. The far-right religious factions that kept Netanyahu in power stand in direct opposition to the secular and moderate parts of the population that no longer want to pay the price for these endless wars. The refusal of ultra-Orthodox Jews to perform military service, while the secular middle class sees its sons and daughters dying in a senseless war in Gaza, is the powder keg that is about to explode. The coming months and years will culminate in armed conflict and civil disobedience within Israel's own borders. The project of Greater Israel is dead, and the wreckage will be tearing Israeli society apart.

The Illegal Occupation of Lebanon and NATO's Complicity

One of the most persistent myths propagated by the West is Israel's right to 'security' at the expense of the sovereignty of its neighbors. Nowhere is this more clearly visible than in Lebanon. The current crisis in southern Lebanon is a direct consequence of Israel's illegal occupation of Lebanese territory. Hezbollah would not exist in its current militant form if Israel had ever respected international law and Lebanon's sovereignty.

Hezbollah's legitimacy as a militia disappears the exact moment Israel withdraws from every square inch of southern Lebanon, including the Shebaa Farms. Israel will have to end this illegal occupation, not because it wants to, but because it has no other choice. They have been thrown out by Hezbollah before, and history will repeat itself. Israel's security can only be guaranteed on the basis of Lebanon's sovereignty, not by leveling that sovereignty to the ground.

What makes this situation even more reprehensible, however, is the role of the West. The NATO and the European Union are not merely passive spectators; they are actively complicit in the atrocities in Iran, Gaza, and Lebanon. By supplying weapons, providing diplomatic cover in the UN Security Council, and remaining silent about war crimes, Western governments bear moral and material responsibility for the bloodshed. NATO preaches human rights and international law while simultaneously facilitating a regime guilty of genocide and the systematic destruction of infrastructure in Lebanon and Gaza. This hypocrisy can no longer be hidden from the rest of the world. The West has completely disqualified itself morally. European governments, afraid of their own voters or held hostage by the American security umbrella, do not dare stand up to Tel Aviv and Washington.

They are complicit, and history will judge them for it.

Filmbestand

The shameless lies of Ursula Von der Leyen at the Ukraine Recovery Conference 2026

The Brainwashing of an Ignorant and Mindless West

How is it possible that this catastrophic policy has endured for so long? The answer lies in the unprecedented ignorance and systematic brainwashing of the American and European populations. The average Western citizen is completely cut off from geopolitical reality. They are unable to point to the countries their governments are waging war against on a map, let alone understand the historical, cultural, or religious nuances of the Middle East.

This ignorance is no accident; it is an active policy. The population has been trained to be fearful of what it does not know. Through the mainstream media and algorithm-driven social media networks (such as Elon Musk's X), citizens are fed daily with a diet of Islamophobia, Russophobia, and blind Zionism.

Repeat a lie long enough and people will come to regard it as the truth. The Western media does not function as a watchdog of democracy, but as the PR department of the military-industrial complex and the pro-Israel lobby.

Americans and Europeans live in a media bubble that tells them their countries are the 'good guys', that wars are fought for 'freedom', and that any criticism of Israel or NATO stems from hatred or foreign influence. They are brainwashed. They trust blindly in the opinions of others because they themselves never take the time to investigate the facts. But that bubble is now bursting. Economic reality - empty wallets - is breaking through the cognitive dissonance. You can convince a population that a war in the Middle East is in its interest until the price of gasoline and food forces them to look out the window.

The End of the American Superpower and the New Reality

The geopolitical consequences of all this are immense. The United States has been reduced to a power that is diplomatically irrelevant and militarily impotent. It cannot keep the Strait of Hormuz open without starting a ground war it cannot win and that would definitively break its own economy. The European Union is an impotent geopolitical dwarf that follows in America's wake and hopes NATO will protect it from a Russia it has itself provoked.

Russia and China are observing this spectacle with a mixture of amusement and strategic insight. They see a West destroying itself through arrogance and corruption. The new security architecture in the Middle East is no longer determined in Washington or Brussels, but in Tehran, Riyadh, Beijing, and Moscow. The Gulf states have recognized the truth: the American cavalry is no longer coming to save them. American promises are just as worthless as the signatures under the MoU.

For Israel, this means a return to reality. There will be no 'Greater Israel'. The settlements are a strategic and moral failure. Israel will have to withdraw behind the pre-1967 borders, or whatever remains of them, and will have to learn to live in a region that no longer fears it, but despises it. Economic isolation and global condemnation as an apartheid and genocidal state will be Netanyahu's only legacy.

Conclusion: The Bill Is Being Paid

The world as we have known it over the past decades is over. The unipolar moment has been definitively buried under the rubble of Gaza, the smoke of southern Lebanon, and the economic misery in Western capitals. Donald Trump will go down in history as the most corrupt and incompetent president the U.S. has ever known, a man who humiliated his own country on the world stage for the sake of his own ego. Netanyahu will stand trial for his crimes, or die as a pariah, while his country is torn apart by internal conflict.

For the attentive, critical reader, the message is clear. Do not trust the mainstream media, for they are the architects of the lie. Be aware of the complicity of our own governments and NATO in these atrocities. History does not judge on the basis of intentions or fine words at press conferences, but on the basis of actions and their consequences. And the consequences of Western arrogance are now unavoidable. Words do not fill a wallet, and lies do not stop rockets. The downfall has begun, and the West stands alone.